This Feng Shui Almanac is dedicated to my clients and to people who believe in ancient Chinese wisdom and the correct timing for important events.

The almanac uses complex calculations, based on ancient Chinese calendar formulas, to determine suitable times for conducting the important events in our life.

In ancient times, hunting and fishing were important for survival. You may see ‘Good for hunting, fishing’ in certain days throughout the book. To protect the environment and animals, I do not recommend recreational hunting or fishing.

About 2017 — The 丁酉 Fire Rooster Year

2017 is a Rooster year. Rooster is the 10th sign of Chinese Zodiac. Why do we call it Fire Rooster? Because based on the Chinese traditional calendar, the heavenly stem of the year is Ding 丁 Fire (Ying Fire), the earthly branch of the year is You 酉, referring to Rooster. Therefore 2017 is a Fire Rooster year.

The rooster crowing before sunrise breaks the dawn. The ancient Chinese considered the rooster to have forecasting abilities. Roosters are intelligent and fast thinkers. Fire Rooster is energetic, passionate and anxious. The rooster enjoys good looking things and is artistic. With fire it clashes with metal, so the year ahead could be beautiful, romantic, creative, enjoyable, but also accompanied by frustration.

The Li Chun Ba Zi of the year are: 丁酉 (fire, metal), 壬寅 (water, wood), 辛酉 (metal, metal), 戊子 (earth, water). The strong elements for this year are metal and water. Earth, wood and fire elements are weak. For many people this will be a year of change.

In 2017 finance will still be one of the main concerns. People will seek opportunities to make money. It will be a hard working year, however extra wealth will be hard to find. Finances will be up and down.

The industries related to wood and earth will be highlighted. Forest, agriculture, education, publishing, fashion, property and construction will be busy. Mining, gold, and currency will be up and down. The travel and entertainment industry will be busy. Spiritual matters and religions will be a focus.

The ruling number for the year is one. The natural environment, relating to earth and water, will be one of the main concerns.

Health this year will have more cases related to blood and nerve blockages.

From the global aspect, China is influenced by a positive star along with troubles. Chinese growth will slow down, but will remain positive. Japan, Korea will be more active with their economies, particularly tourism and education. From the west, America will have domestic conflict, anger and violence, this will have negative impact on their economy. South East Asia is influenced by a good star, and which is good for their economy. It is a good year for them to focus and improve their fundamental infrastructures.

Australia is influenced by a negative star in the rooster year. People need to be more careful with decision making, and watch out for health and safety. There will be less investment from overseas. Finance turnover will be unbalanced and circulation poor. The country should consider basic infrastructure, agriculture and education, to develop inner strength and improve productivity.

About the Almanac

This almanac is a combination of three calendars: the solar calendar, lunar calendar and Xia or Farmers calendar (for Chinese astrology, feng shui use). This almanac is an English version of Chinese Tong Shu 通书 (General Book).

Most people are familiar with solar and lunar calendars, but not the Xia 夏历 calendar. The Xia calendar is derived from the ten heavenly stems and twelve earthly branches.

In ancient China, our ancestors developed a Stem and Branch recording method called 干支纪法 (gan zhi ji fa). Heaven is the main ruler, earth obeys heaven. Therefore, heaven follows the trunk/stem called 天干 (Tian Gan) – heavenly stem; earth follows the branches called 地支 (Di Zhi) – earthly branches.

The ancient Chinese arranged the 10 heavenly stems and 12 earthly branches into sixty pairs. 30 yang pairs and 30 yin pairs. It called sixty 甲子 (jia zi). The calendar repeats every sixty years. Ancient masters followed the force of the nature and yin yang philosophy, and developed a series of formulas to define good or bad times for daily activities.

Tong Shu is a book which follows these formulas to calculate lucky dates and lucky times for major events, such as: engagements, weddings, earth moving (starting to build or renovate a property), burials, trade, opening a well, opening ceremonies (officially starting a new business), fishing, hunting, etc.

Choosing a lucky day to conduct a major event will enhance the success of the event.

Basic Knowledge

The ancient Chinese believed that everything in the universe was made from five elements: metal, water, wood, fire and earth.

The productive cycle of the five elements is: wood supports fire, fire supports earth, earth supports metal, metal supports water, water supports wood.

The destructive cycle of the five elements is: metal cuts wood, wood destroys earth, earth destroys water, water destroys fire, fire destroys metal.

The interactions of the five elements create the natural forces and changes in the universe and human destiny.

Basic Knowledge

The 阴Yin 阳Yang Philosophy:

Yin Yang is the principle of dualism which underpins all Chinese beliefs. Yin and yang are the negative and positive principles which together symbolize perfect harmony.

The symbols of yin and yang are believed to constitute the Dao (道). The eternal principle of heaven and earth; life and death; the sun and the moon, one unable to have meaning without the other. Yin and yang depend on each other, and together they give the meaning to the existence of mankind. Inside the yang, there is a bit of yin, and inside yin, there is a bit of yang.

Thus without dark (yin), there can be no light (yang); without hot (yang), there is no cold (yin); without day (yang) there can be no night (yin), and without stillness (yin), there can be no movement (yang). Yin and yang continually interact, thereby creating changes.

In the Chinese calendar, every element is either yin or yang.
